Cambridge Police Academy
Procedures Manual
PRESERVING CRIME SCENES

Establishing the crime scene is the first and most important stage of any investigation. Initial treatment of the scene can make or break a case. Responding officers should take the following actions: Survey the scene for danger or an ongoing crime. Keep all persons unrelated to the investigation away. Protect all possible evidence until crime scene investigators (CSI's) arrive.

1) Surveying the area. Responding officers should note all persons and vehicles present. Any odd smells should be noted. These may disappear before specialists arrive. Officers should pull aside potential witnesses for questioning.

2) Keeping people out. It is important to keep members of the public and the media out of the crime scene area. Cordon off the crime scene's perimeter. Only allow access to authorized personnel.

3) Protecting evidence. It is crucial to preserve all physical evidence as well as possible. Officers should note objects and surfaces that may contain fingerprints. They should protect anything that may have traces of hair, blood, or saliva from contamination. Officers should not disturb the ground within a crime scene. It may contain footprints. Officers must protect all such evidence until specialists arrive to document it.

CRIME SCENE INVESTIGATION

Crime scene investigation is the meeting point of science, logic and law. Processing a crime scene is a long, tedious process that involves purposeful documentation of the conditions at the scene and the collection of any physical evidence that could possibly illuminate what happened and point to who did it. There is no typical crime scene, there is no typical body of evidence and there is no typical investigative approach.

Police officers are typically the first to arrive at a crime scene. They arrest the perpetrator if he's still there and call for an ambulance if necessary. They are responsible for securing the scene so no evidence is destroyed.

The investigation of a crime scene begins when the CSI unit receives a call from the police officers or detectives on the scene. The overall system works something like this:

- The CSI's arrive on the scene and make sure it is secure. They do an initial walk-through to get an overall feel for the crime scene, find out if anyone moved anything before they arrived, and generate initial theories based on visual examination. They make note of potential evidence. At this point, they touch nothing.

- The CSI's thoroughly document the scene by taking photographs and drawing sketches during a second walk-through. Sometimes, the documentation stage includes a video walk-through, as well. They document the scene as a whole and document anything they have identified as evidence. They still touch nothing.

- Now it's time to touch stuff – very, very carefully. The CSI's systematically make their way through the scene collecting all potential evidence, tagging it, logging it and packaging it so it remains intact on its way to the lab. Depending on the task breakdown of the CSI unit they work for and their areas of expertise, they may or may not analyze the evidence in the lab.

- The crime lab processes all of the evidence the CSI's collected at the crime scene. When the lab results are in, they go to the lead detective on the case.

WORKING WITH VICTIMS AND WITNESSES

A witness is considered as a person, other than a defendant, who is likely to give evidence in court. All victims are also witnesses and should be treated as such. It is the information provided by witnesses and victims that enables a suspect's version of events to be validated or challenged.

The success of any investigation depends largely on the accuracy and detail of the material obtained from witnesses. Investigators must recognize the individual needs and concerns of witnesses and treat them with dignity and respect. This can have a significant impact on how witnesses cooperate with the investigation and any subsequent prosecution.

Many witnesses fear the consequences of providing information. They, therefore, need to be confident that the investigator will deal with the information they provide appropriately. If the investigator establishes trust with the interviewee beforehand, they are more likely to give a full and accurate account. Witnesses have a right to expect that they will be listened to and will receive fair treatment.

By adopting a calm, reassuring interview style, investigators can establish the main points of what witnesses know about the incident. Inappropriate or ill-considered methods of dealing with a witness may hamper the investigation and delay or prevent the supply of relevant material to the investigator.

The witness may require medical attention or the presence of a suitable adult and the investigator needs to address this. Common sense has to be applied and the interview should be limited to obtaining sufficient information to progress the enquiry. The circumstances surrounding the fast-track interview should be recorded, and if the witness is receiving non-urgent attention, permission should be obtained from medical staff. Suitable care and support can then be provided prior to an in-depth interview.

7. Read the following text and discuss it in the form of a dialogue.

DEVELOPING A SUSPECT

If a suspect is not at the scene and not apprehended nearby, it is necessary to develop a suspect through information provided by victims, witnesses and other persons likely to know about the crime or the suspect.

Rather than simply asking a witness to describe a suspect, ask specific questions about the most important identifiers needed to apprehend criminal suspects: general description information (sex, race or national origin, age, height, weight, build, etc.); facial and clothing information; other physical features or peculiarities. A description sheet also helps people describe suspects.

Witnesses may not have observed the actual crime but may have seen a vehicle leaving the scene and can describe it and its occupants. Obtain a complete description of any vehicles involved (vehicle type; color; make and model; condition; and license plate numbers). Identifying the car may lead to identifying the suspect.

Remember that eyewitness identification is highly fallible because of factors such as poor visibility, brief duration, distance and faulty memory. Because of such problems with witness identification, victim or witness identification of a suspect should be corroborated by as much physical and circumstantial evidence as possible.

If the victim or witness does not know the suspect but saw him or her clearly, mug shots may be used. This procedure is very time-consuming and is of value only if the suspect has a police record and has been photographed.

If witnesses can provide adequate information, a composite image can be made of the person who committed the crime. Composite drawings are most commonly used to draw human faces or full bodies, but they can also be used for any inanimate object described by a witness – for example, vehicles, unusual marks or symbols, tattoos or clothing.

 - b) They are based on reasonable belief.
 - c) They can seize evidence from homes.
 - d) They can provide the basis for a warrant.

3. What is NOT evidence against the suspect?
 - a) a crowbar
 - b) a ski mask
 - c) televisions
 - d) an automobile

FRUITFUL SEARCH LEADS TO BURGLAR'S ARREST

Denver police conducted a search on Tuesday of a house at 720 S. Colfax. Officer Vincent Sully says he noticed someone moving items from a vehicle into the house. Many of the items matched the description of those recently stolen from area homes. "This fact," said Officer Sully, "provided reasonable belief that this was our suspect." According to Federal Law such suspicion is grounds to carry out a search. Police Chief Mancini explains, "The circumstances did not require the authorization of a search warrant." The suspect's lawyer plans to challenge this view, claiming that the search was illegal. It is unlikely that this argument will be accepted and the charges will most likely not be dropped.

Upon conducting the search, officers found what they were looking for, and more. In the suspect's vehicle they found three flat screen televisions identical to those that disappeared in Sunday's Water Street robberies. Inside the suspect's residence police found thousands of dollars worth of allegedly stolen goods. Among the many items confiscated in the seizure were a ski mask and a black painted crowbar. Witnesses have reported seeing a thief in a similar mask break in to cars and houses with a crowbar. Possession of these objects could connect the suspect with those other burglaries. The suspect was arrested and is awaiting trial.

7. Read the following text and discuss it in the form of a dialogue.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES: THE LIMITATIONS OF THE POLICE

What the police MAY do

Police may engage in "reasonable" searches and seizures. To prove that a search is "reasonable," the police must generally show that it is more likely than not that a crime has occurred, and that if a search is conducted it is probable that they will find either stolen goods or evidence of the crime. This is called probable cause.

In some situations, the police must first make this showing to a judge who issues a search warrant. In many special circumstances, however, the police may be able to conduct a search without a warrant.

Police may use first-hand information, or tips from an informant to justify the need to search your property. If an informant's information is used, the police must prove that the information is reliable under the circumstances.

Once a warrant is obtained, the police may enter onto the specified area of the property and search for the items listed on the warrant. Police may extend the search beyond the specified area of the property or include other items in the search beyond those specified or listed in the warrant if it is necessary to ensure their safety or the safety of others; prevent the destruction of evidence; discover more about possible evidence or stolen items that are in plain view; hunt for evidence or stolen items which, based upon their initial search of the specified area, they believe may be in a different location on the property.

What the police MAY NOT do

The police may not perform a warrantless search anywhere you have a reasonable expectation of privacy, unless one of the warrant exceptions applies.

The police may not use evidence resulting from an illegal search to find other evidence.

The police may not submit an affidavit in support of obtaining a search warrant if they did not have a reasonable belief in the truth of the statements in the affidavit.

Unless there is a reasonable suspicion that it contains evidence, illegal items, or stolen goods, the police may not search your vehicle. If your car has been confiscated by the police, however, they may search it.

Unless they have a reasonable suspicion that you are involved in a criminal activity, the police may not "stop and frisk" you. If they have a reasonable suspicion, they may pat down your outer clothing if they are concerned that you might be concealing a weapon.

UNIT 5 MAKING AN ARREST

1. Read the page from a police manual. Then, mark the statements as true (T) or false (F).

	True	False
1. Suspects do not have to supply identification when asked by an officer.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
2. Officers can use any reasonable means to arrest a resisting suspect.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>
3. Juveniles' parents must be notified before an arrest.	<input type="checkbox"/>	<input type="checkbox"/>

ARRESTS

Arrests can be made under several circumstances.

An officer may arrest someone when:

1. He has possession of an arrest warrant.
2. He witnesses someone committing a crime.
3. He has identified probable cause.

When he stops a suspect, a police officer has the right to ask for identification. The officer can ask the suspect for his name, address, license and an explanation of his actions. Note that the suspect is not required by law to provide any of this information.

Police officers have the right to frisk or pat down suspects when they believe their personal safety may be at risk. Officers have the right to confiscate drugs, weapons, or stolen items during a search. The aforementioned items also provide cause for arrest.

When placing a suspect under arrest, the officer should advise the suspect of his rights. A more complete search of the suspect for weapons or other dangerous objects should be conducted. Then, an officer should handcuff the suspect. If the suspect resists, any means within reason may be used to subdue the suspect.

Please note: When juveniles are arrested, their parents must be notified immediately. Oftentimes juveniles and mentally ill persons can be dealt with informally. Never arrest someone when a warning would be as effective.

7. Read the following text and discuss it in the form of a dialogue.

WHAT PROCEDURES MUST THE POLICE FOLLOW WHILE MAKING AN ARREST?

There are only a very limited number of circumstances in which an officer may make an arrest:

- The officer personally observed a crime;
- The officer has probable cause to believe that person arrested committed a crime;
- The officer has an arrest warrant issued by a judge.

An officer cannot arrest someone just because he/she feels like it or has a vague hunch that someone might be a criminal. Police officers have to be able to justify their arrest usually by showing some tangible evidence that led them to probable cause.

Generally, an arrest happens when the person being arrested reasonably believes that he/she is not free to leave. The officer need not use handcuffs, or place the arrestee in a police cruiser, although police often use these tactics to protect themselves. Police also do not have to read Miranda Rights at the time of arrest. However, the police must read a suspect his/her Miranda Rights before an interrogation, so many police departments recommend that Miranda Rights be read at the time of arrest. This way, they can start questioning right away, and also, any information volunteered by a suspect can be used against them. Finally, although police will almost always tell an arrestee why they are under arrest, they may not necessarily have any legal obligation to do so. This depends on both the jurisdiction and the circumstances of the arrest.

One universal rule police officers must follow is that they are not allowed to use excessive force or treat the arrestee cruelly. Generally, police officers are only allowed to use the minimum amount of force necessary to protect themselves and bring the suspect into police custody. This is why people are advised to never resist an arrest or argue with police. The more a suspect struggles, the more force is required for the police to do their job. If the arrestee thinks the arrest is unjustified or incorrect, he/she can always challenge it later with the help of an attorney, and if warranted, bring a civil rights case.

7. Read the following text and discuss it in the form of a dialogue.

TYPICAL STEPS IN THE BOOKING PROCESS

Step 1: Recording the suspect's name and the crime for which the suspect was arrested

In olden days, this information became part of a handwritten police blotter; now virtually all booking records are computerized.

Step 2: Taking a "mug shot"

A mug shot can help to determine which of two people with the same name was arrested. A mug shot can also help to establish a suspect's physical condition at the time of arrest. The suspect's physical condition at arrest can be relevant to a claim of police use of unlawful force or to whether the suspect had been in an altercation before being arrested.

Step 3: Taking the suspect's clothing and personal property into police custody

At a suspect's request, some booking officers allow suspects to keep small personal items like a wristwatch. Any articles taken from the suspect must be returned upon release from jail, unless they constitute contraband or evidence of a crime.

Step 4: Taking fingerprints

Fingerprints are a standard part of a booking record, and are typically entered into a nationwide database. Comparing fingerprints left at the scene of a crime to those already in the database helps police officers identify perpetrators of crimes.

Step 5: Conducting a full body search

Police officers routinely make cursory pat-down inspections at the time of arrest. Far more intrusive is the strip search that is often part of the booking process. To prevent weapons and drugs from entering a jail, booking officers frequently require arrestees to remove all their clothing and submit to a full body search.

Step 6: Checking for warrants

The booking officer checks to see if an arrestee has any other charges pending, ranging from unpaid parking tickets to murder charges. Suspects with warrants pending are normally not released on bail.

Step 7: Health screening

To protect the health and safety of jail officials and other inmates, the booking process may include X-rays (to detect tuberculosis) and blood tests (to detect sexually transmitted diseases such as AIDS).

Step 8: Eliciting information relevant to incarceration conditions

To reduce the likelihood of violence and injuries, jail officials often ask arrestees about gang affiliations, former gang affiliations, and other outside relationships. Depending on the answers, an inmate may have to be placed in protective custody or housed in one section of a jail rather than another.

Step 9: DNA sample

Suspects may be required to provide DNA samples that are entered in national DNA databases.
