ВВЕДЕНИЕ

Учебно-методическая разработка предназначена для студентов юридических колледжей. Разработка знакомит обучающихся с традициями стран изучаемого языка, помогает овладеть основами юридической лексики и грамматическими структурами, характерными для профессиональных текстов. Материалы по разным аспектам права взяты из современных английских и американских источников. Оригинальные тексты сокращены и адаптированы автором в соответствии с уровнем (pre-Intermediate).

Учебно-методическая разработка состоит из 4 основных частей (юнитов). Первый раздел является вводным, направлен на повторение грамматического материала и общеразговорной лексики. 2-3 юниты рассчитаны ориентировочно на 8-10 часов аудиторных занятий и 6-8 часов домашней работы. Каждый юнит завершается итоговыми лексико-грамматическими тестами. В 4 юните представлены материалы по актуальным разделам грамматики, упражнения и тестовые задания- аналоги заданий, предлагаемых на дифференцированном зачете по итогам курса.

Разработка ориентирована на развитие навыков монологического и диалогического общения, на умение составлять письменное высказывание по теме (formal – informal letters), переводить предложения и тексты с английского языка на русский, а также выполнять тестовые задания в заданное время.

Hi Lucia

How are you? It was so nice to meet you last week in Sydney at the sales meeting. How was the rest of your trip? Did you see any kangaroos? I hope you got home to Mexico City OK.

Anyway, I have the documents about the new Berlin offices. We're going to be open in three months. I moved here from London just last week. They are very nice offices, and the location is perfect. There are lots of restaurants, cafés and banks in the area. There's also public transport; we are next to an U-Bahn (that is the name for the metro here). Maybe you can come and see them one day? I would love to show you Berlin, especially in the winter. You said you have never seen snow – you will see lots here!

Here's a photo of you and me at the restaurant in Sydney. That was a very fun night! Remember the singing Englishman? Crazy! Please send me any other photos you have of that night. Good memories.

Please give me your email address and I will send you the documents.

Bye for now

Mikel

Hi Samia,

Just a quick email to say that sounds like a great idea. Saturday is better for me because I'm meeting my parents on Sunday. So if that's still good for you, why don't you come here? Then you can see the new flat and all the work we've done on the kitchen since we moved in. We can eat at home and then go for a walk in the afternoon. It's going to be so good to catch up finally. I want to hear all about your new job!

Our address is 52 Charles Road, but it's a bit difficult to find because the house numbers are really strange here. If you turn left at the post office and keep going past the big white house on Charles Road, there's a small side street behind it with the houses 50–56 in. Don't ask me why the side street doesn't have a different name! But call me if you get lost and I'll come and get you.

Let me know if there's anything you do/don't like to eat. Really looking forward to seeing you!

See you soon!

Gregor

People say that college life is something that one never forgets. I'm a freshman and a full-time student of the law faculty at the college. Our group consists of 16 students, including our monitor. We study two languages: English and Russian. Every member of our group feels like a real student, having a student membership card, a student record card and a library card. Every day we have different classes: lectures, seminars or tutorials. There are so many students and so few rooms that some groups have to study in the library. We try not to be late for classes. As a rule, almost every student of our group comes to the college five minutes before the bell rings. So we can have a chat with each other. We usually have a lot of things to talk about. After classes everybody goes home to do a real avalanche of homework. We have to sit up late doing it. If one cannot cope with the work load of college he or she immediately starts lagging behind and missing classes. It's easier to keep pace with the program rather than to catch up with it later. During the term we write reproductions, compositions, papers, translations. Our works are handed in and handed out. At the end of each term we have tests and an examination session. When we have passed all the tests we start sitting up for the exams. After the exams a long-awaited vacation comes. Now I can't say that college life is a fascinating, fantastic experience. For this moment I can compare it only with a daily routine I had at school.

Since Roman times teaching and scholarship in the law have provided prominent roles in the legal profession. Until the 18th century, teaching of the English common law was vested exclusively in the Inns of Court, and a good deal of continental European teaching for professional practice—particularly in the case of notaries and procurators—was also professionally organized.

Even university law teaching in Europe often involved interchange between practitioner and teacher, exemplified in such great figures as the French 18th-century teacher, advocate, and judge Robert Joseph Pothier, whose commentaries provided the foundation for the Napoleonic Code of civil law. Much law teaching in the new university law schools that sprang up in the United States, the United Kingdom, and the Commonwealth in the 19th and 20th centuries was initially carried on part-time by attorneys, barristers, and judges, and some still is. Sir William Blackstone, the first holder of a chair of English law—the Vinerian professorship at Oxford—came from the bar and became a judge. Civil Law

Civil Law (Roman-Germanic legal family) is the most widespread type of legal system in the world, applied in various forms in approximately 150 countries. Also referred to as European continental law, the civil law system is derived mainly from the Roman ‘Corpus Juris Civilus’, (Body of Civil Law), a collection of laws and legal interpretations compiled under the Roman Emperor Justinian I between A.D. 528 and 565.

The major feature of civil law systems is that the laws are organized into systematic written codes. Common Law (Anglo-Saxon legal family) is a type of legal system, often synonymous with “English common law”, which is the system of England and Wales in the UK. It is also in force in approximately 80 countries which were a part of or greatly influenced by the former British Empire. The English common law reflects Biblical influences as well as systems imposed by early conquerors including the Romans, Anglo-Saxons, and Normans.

Some legal scholars attribute the formation of the English common law system to King Henry II (r. 1154-1189). Until the time of his reign, laws customary were administered locally. Henry II, having established the King’s court, designated that laws were “common” to the entire England.

The foundation of English common law is “legal precedent” – referred to as stare decisis (Lat), meaning “to stand by things decided”. In the English common law system, court judges are bound in their decisions in large part by the rules and other doctrines developed by the judges of earlier English courts. These rules were supplemented or amended over time.

Романо-германская правовая система объединяет правовые системы всех стран континентальной Европы. Эта правовая система возникла на основе римского права. Основным источником права – нормативный акт (normative act). Для неё характерно (It has got...) четкое деление норм права на отрасли (fields). Все отрасли подразделяются на две подсистемы (subfields): частное право и публичное право (private law and public law).

К сфере публичного права относятся: административное, уголовное, конституционное, международное публичное. К частному относятся уголовное, гражданское, семейное, трудовое, международное, частное право (criminal, civil, family, labour, international). Органы государственной власти подразделяются на законодательные и исполнительные (legislative and executive). Законотворческие функции составляют монополию законодателя. Для большинства стран этой системы характерно наличие конституции, представленной как единый печатный документ (written constitution).

b. Anglo-Saxon legal system – Common Law System

Общее право составляет основу национальных правовых систем Великобритании (кроме Шотландии), Канады, США, Ямайки, Австралии и в некоторых других странах. Прародительницей этой правовой семьи была Англия. В основе этой правовой системы лежит принцип “to stand by the things decided” (от латинского, stare decisis – стоять на решённом), означающий, что при выработке решения судом господствующая сила принадлежит прецеденту (precedent). Основным источником (the main source) права в Англо-саксонской правовой системе является обычай, подтверждённый (proved by) судебным прецедентом. Законодательство рассматривается как разновидность договора (agreement). Таким образом, в отличие от романо-германской системы, судебные решения играют большую роль в формировании права, тогда как романо-германская система оставляет за судами функцию толкования и применения права.

In countries where the legal system follows the English common-law tradition, the function of prosecution is usually distinguished from that of investigation and adjudication. In most countries the prosecution is performed by an official who is not part of either the police or the judicial system; a wide variety of terms have been used to designate this official (e.g., district attorney in the state jurisdictions of the United States, procurator-fiscal in Scotland, and crown attorney in Canada). The prosecutor may be an elected local official (as in many jurisdictions in the United States) or a member of an organization responsible to a minister of the national government.

FAMILY LAW IN THE UK

Parents are not held directly responsible for the criminal acts of their children. However, there is a belief that youth crime is partly caused by poor parenting, and so the Government and the Youth Justice Board are looking at ways to support parents and getting them to come on parenting courses. Parenting courses are offered by many organizations, for example, Parentline Plus, and many parents attend voluntarily. However, the Government has brought in Parenting Orders. These can be imposed where:

- A child safety or an anti-social behaviour order has been made;
- A final warning has been issued;
- A child has already committed an offence;
- A parent can be taken to court for failing to make sure their child attends school;
- A child has been excluded from school for serious misbehavior;
- A parent has refused to enter into a parenting contract or breached their parenting contract;
- A Parenting Order means that a parent must attend a maximum of 12 parenting guidance or counselling sessions. If they do not, they can be fined. Parenting Orders have recently been extended to parents whose children are viewed as at risk of offending, even if they have not yet committed an offence. A Parenting Order could involve a residential weekend course for the parent. It can last for up to 12 months. Breach of a Parenting Order is a criminal offence and can result in a fine of up to £1000 and/or community service. FINAL TERM TEST 5

Task 1. Read the text and answer the questions

While many citizens think the real action in the criminal courts happens during trials, they are wrong in that assessment. Ninety percent of criminal cases are disposed of by guilty pleas rather than trials. Most of those guilty pleas are the result of agreements between prosecutors and defense attorneys. Plea-bargaining is a process in which a prosecutor makes a concession to a defendant (for example, reducing charges or recommending a lighter sentence) in exchange for the defendant's pleading guilty. Even cases that go to trial are sometimes decided before the trial begins.

The prosecutor is the government's lawyer. Following the arrest of a suspect by the police, a prosecutor decides whether or not to press charges. If the prosecutor decides to proceed, he or she files a charging document with a lower court. A charging document accuses the arrestee of committing a crime. The most common charging documents used are the information and the indictment. Although the information and indictment differ in some respects, each of these contains a statement of the charge.

For the first appearance, the defendant is taken from jail and brought before the lower court judge. The judge informs the defendant of the charge in the complaint, explains to the defendant that he or she has certain rights, offers to appoint counsel at the expense of the government if the defendant is indigent (too poor to afford a lawyer), and sets bail.
